Much Money Has Been Expended but Little Good Has Resulted From it -The Roberts' Bill.

At the Good Roads convention held in this city a week ago, an interesting paper on "The Necessity of Legislation in this State to Establish a Uniform System of Road Construction on a Basis of Practical Engineering," was presented by Hon, William Spry. Mr. Spry

The necessity of legislation in this state to establish a uniform system of read construction on a basis of practical engineering is apparent to everyone who may have occasion to travel over the roads maintained under the system

It is not my purpose, however, to ucize unduly, prevailing conditions, I am reminded of the fact that for I am reminded of the fact that Utah is differently situated, with re-gards to distances, nature of soils, and lack of wealth, to many other states, particularly those of the east, which have not these difficulties to contend

For largest slice of the appropriation. For the purpose of expending the money in conformity with the regulations applying state agents have been appointed, who, while being practical men, each have had their own theories as to what constitutes a good road, and on the principle that many men have many minds the result has been, that many roads have been built in many places, and of many kinds.

Of this amount the jury alof $5,500. ### PUPILS PLAY WELL.

Misses Bauer and Howe Entertain Friends at I iano Recital.

The Y. M. C. A. auditorium hall was comfortably filled last evening on the occasion of the plano recital given by Misses Alma Bauer and Effle Howe, advanced pupils of Mr. J. A. Anderson of this city. It was an excellent performance, in which the results of careful training and conscientious study were evident. Miss Bauer played the Allegretto vivace from the Beethovan Sonata, Op. 31, No. 3; Newland's "Valse Caprice," the Liszt paraphrase of the grand quartet from "Rigolette," and the Schubert "Impromptu" in B flat. Miss Howe played Nicode's "Baracole," Henselt's "Bird Study," the MacDowell "Polonaise." and in duet with Mr. Anderson, the Mendelssohn "G minor Concerto."

with Mr. Anderson, the Mendelssonn "G minor Concerto."

The MacDowell "Polonaise." the Rigoletto" paraphrase and the "Concerto" were especially meritorious performances. The technical requirements are severe, but they were complied with, and the entire performance was given with a grace and unconsciouse ease that was reassuring to the audience. The young ladies appeared to have a complete mastery over their fingers, and for the most part played without having the scores before them. Fred Graham's voice seemed unusually sweet and bird like, and his high falsette notes were so well taken as to be undistinguishable from the chest tenes. One of his numbers was a composition of his own, "If Love Werz What the Rose Is," a very meritorious effort.

torious effort.

The pianists, as well as the vocalist, were heartily and deservedly well received; but it would have been more in accord with correct concert room ethics had the young ladies acknowledged, even though slightly, the applause ten-dered.

KNOCKERS VS BOOSTERS.

Semething for the Local Rule or Ruin Crowd to Read and Think About.

Along comes a proposition for improvement of the town,
Up bobs the chronic kicker for he'd like to knock it down;
He'll set his jaw a waggin' for he cannot stand the shock
Of progress in the city, so he'll knock, knock, knock,

He's so queerly constituted that he does not like to see not like to see
His neighborhood progressing as it surely ought to be:
He hates to see extension of his city block by block.
For his favorite occupation is to knock, knock, knock.

When he meets a proposition he will agreet it with a leer.

And holler, 'bout the taxes—and take another beer;

Then his talking appartus he'll wind up like a clock

And set the thing a-goin'—hear him knock, knock, knock.

But the boosters favor progress with a feelin' good and strong.

When they meet a proposition they help push the thing along.
So it doesn't hinder progress, nor it doesn't stop the clock.
For this industrious objector to knock, knock, knock.

WESTERN MARKET LETTER

Kansas City, Mo., Monday, Oct. 9 .-

More than 82,000 cattle came in last week, and conditions were more favor-able to sellers than they have been for some time. Country buyers were more active than any week before this season, and packer buyers competed with them for some medium fleshy steers, ac-count of scarcity of desirable killing steers of all classes. These cattle have formerly gone to the feeders without question. The result was an advance on all kinds of steers of 10 to 20 cents, Cows declined about 10 cents, as large Cows declined about 10 cents, as large numbers of them were received from northern Texas and Colorado, Some heavy mountain cows sold at $2.60, and a string of "J. J." cows, from Channing, Texas sold Friday at $2.60, the canners on them at $1.90, bulk of the medium to common cows at $2.20 to $2.50. Majority of range steers, both for killing and for the country sold at $2.75 to $3.35, with a few strings of desirable stockers and feeders up to $3.60. Calf receipts were lighter, and prices a quarter higher, especially for heifer calves, not too heavy, which had to be substinot too heavy, which had to be substi-tuted for light veals, which are hard to get. Iteceipts for sheep and lambs were 31,000 last week, against 57,000 the previous week, and prices advanced about 25 cents, as demand was strong from all sources. Wethers sold late last week at $4.85, yearlings at $5.00, but toppy stuff will bring about these figures. Country demand is as strong as ever, breeding ewes, $4.25 to $4.60, wethers and yearlings up to $4.75, and feeding lambs, ewas, $4.25 to $4.60, wethers and year-lings up to $4.75, and feeding lambs, $5.50 to $6.25.
